

A Letter of Recommendation for Peter Eldredge

To Whom It May Concern:

Over the past year I've been fortunate enough to work with Peter not only at my company but in the classroom as well. Peter was a student in my Overview of Computer Games class at Drexel University. There, he learned the foundations of game design and went on to create a polished 2D puzzle-platform experience. Peter took on a leadership role in his group of five students and delivered an efficient, precise codebase to go along with the project. Throughout the course, Peter helped his teammates not only to push their critical thinking but to teach and lead them to better programming practices from a game design perspective.

At the beginning of the course, Peter was relatively new to using the Unity game engine. This did not hold him back the slightest. He went outside of the course requirements to further his knowledge of the subject matter to make a project that exceeded the course expectations.

After the term concluded, Peter expressed interest in applying for a Game Developer Co-op position at PHL Collective. Having seen Peter's passion for games and work ethic in the classroom, it was an easy decision to have him come in and be a part of our team for the next nine months. During this time, Peter gained experience building to the iOS and Android platforms, developing a vertical slice and working with audio interfaces. Peter was able to work within our existing code base and make additions seamlessly. He was able to create scripts from scratch following the guidelines and best practices that were outlined by our studio. Peter's ability to learn new programs and pick up skills is quite impressive. There were multiple times on the job where he had to learn something that he was unfamiliar with. Peter quickly dove into the subject matter and came out with a new understanding on how it functioned.

If you are looking for someone with great C# skills that has a passion for efficient code with a strong dedicated work ethic, you have found that person in Peter.

Sincerely,

Bren King

Co-Owner & Art Director at PHL Collective Adjunct Professor at Drexel University

(215) 622-6184
bren@phlcollective.com